the anti-slavery sentiment of the country, and even went before the people upon that issue. Its defeat, under the leadership of Gen. Cass, has compelled it to take a new point of departure, and non-intervention with slavery is now its proclaimed doctrine, according to the ukase of yesterday's Union. This change of nosition, by our content of the problem of the public mind, of even the Democracy. They are so purely selfish when resolved into their component parts, that they repel all disinterested persons. This change of position, by our contemporary, who assumes to speak for the Demorary, who assumes to she to the country, we have been pre-eracy of the country, we have been pre-pared for, by the recent issue of events in Connecticut, Wisconsin, Ohio, and Virginia. In those States, the anti-slavery sentiment party openly coalesced during the spring ing public sentiment, would have been injust passed, and it is probable this coalescence will continue, until it shall unite the Democracy of every State in the Union, unless it should so happen that the slavery question in the new Mexican territories all he settled within the next nine months by the people of those territories. In such new doctrine of the Democracy of the present year, namely slavery non-intervention, will fall into desuetude of itself, for want of a field in which to oppose an event—an event highly probable—the new doctrine of the Democracy of the pre-

an event—an event—and of a field in which to operate.

The change of which we have spoken, is in accordance with the nature of Jackson into Democracy, which is, to change with the course of events and the pressure of necessity; but this variable character has never—according to our recollection, been incorporate elements of popularity than the course of events and the pressure of necessity; but this variable character has never—according to our recollection, been incorporate elements of popularity as not yet begun to develope itself. The Democratic party astonished as it is articles of faith until now. The White it is capable to binding to revene event of such a political principle, is obvious. It is a mantle broad enough to cover every political aberration that can be conceived. While it is capable of binding to getter, in one political family, the most discovered and materials, it looses entirely the bonds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the honds of political body, for the opinion of the country which the contract of the political body, for the opinion of the country which the contract of the political body, for the opinion of the through the political body, for the opinion of the country which the contract of the political body, for the opinion of the through the political body, for the opinion of the through the political body, for the opinion of the country which the contract of the political body, for the opinion of the contract of the political body, for the opinion of the country which the political body, for the opinion of the contract of the po dividual opinion as the rule of action upon the political body, for the opinion of the majority. This is the natural result of the condition upon which they will be permitted fourths rule, which has been in vogue to hold that share, will be non-interference three-fourths rule, which has a Democratic principle of action for some years past. From majorities, the Democracy of 1844 passed almost into totalities, and from this point, the Democracy of 1849 proposes now to plunge into individualities. Progressive conservatism involves in its action the destruction of good things as well as of had things. It is not the woice of the majority, but the will of every member of the Democracy. It is no conservatism cannot be sarvatism at all. Conservatism cannot be sarvatism at all. Conservation control to the country upon the slave question, so as to induce it to entrust the federal power to the induce of the induce it to entrust the federal power to the induce it to entrust the federal power to the induce it to entrust the federal power to the induce it to entrust the federal power to the induce it to entrust the federal power in the federal power as a Democratic principle of action for in elections and abstinence from partisan for Progression. Every Democrat and every body else will know and feel, what the Union means by this doctrine. It is constant progress. The desire of constant nothing more than a movement, to get into power, but the Democratic native to get into power. Union means by this doctrine. It is constant progress. The desire of constant progress, is inconsistent with conservatism. It becomes an evil thought, and begets its natural offspring—a desire of change.

To allow the power of changing its doctrines, views, and principles so as to make the montribute to the objects to be gained, is to make a party corrupt. Indeed, such a permission can only proceed from a corrupt the conservation with conservation and the progress of the accomplishment of any such arrangement. It under his admiristration, the case, which we believe will speedily be the case, which we believe will speedily be the case, the very Democracy itself will repose more than a movement, to enable the Democratic party to get into power, but the Democrati permission can only proceed from a corrupt the very Democracy itself will repose more design. If the Union had stated the principles of Democracy to be centered in this one object, namely, the desire and determinant of the could say. But be this as it may, we shall nation to get and keep office, and that all its precepts and practices must conform to the achievement of this one purpose, our humble opinion is, that it would have avowed a fact which a sheet where a sheet without exposing them thoroughly, for the desire of power again in 1853 for the "Democrats, naturalized citizens, native citizens," which nobody could be found to doubt.

Then, slavery non-intervention would be Because we call the supporters of the understood to mean what it really is, a device to deceive the anti-slavery sentiment of the Whig party, the Union asks where are our the Democracy of the North into a belief, that it would be respected, if Democrats We'll answer. They are where they were were in power in the federal government.

Then, progressive conservatism would be understood to be, a mere adaptation of partisan politics to the necessities of the day as an engine of obtaining and keeping office.
